I think it's fair to say national lockdowns were not received wisdom before then. Even measures such as short-term school closings and postponing large gatherings generated serious debate. Now advocating a return to normal is considered extremist (as you noted). What has changed?

It is true that people are TRYING to live their lives normally, but much of the country remains under rules that grow more bizarre and random by the day. (Note that I haven't even mentioned the mask mandates, which, intrusive as they are, don't prevent people from going out.)

In the movies, this would lead to a stunning comeback; in real life it probably won't. But we'll get to hear what the guy really thinks. I am hoping he'll condemn white nationalism and commit to a peaceful transfer of power too (those things might even help him politically).

The models tell us that if we run 40 PCR cycles and death certificate match, we are going to have lots of deaths we can call Covid forever. And we are going to count them and publicize them and use them like you wouldn't believe.

That would be just so tragic if that happens.

And the 30-day cutoff is a misnomer — because a positive PCR test does NOT mean a person has an actual active #Covid infection.

These rules are designed to produce the highest possible #Covid death count. That's inarguable.

The real question is why.

One other key point - about 190,000 Americans over 85 have died this year, and 345,000 over 75. Many of those died from respiratory illness or pneumonia. Thus, depending on how loose the criteria becomes for #COVID probable deaths, the #COVID numbers can get very big very fast.

Great, a new made-up chart and metric from friends of the folks who brought you @IHME_UW. Why is 500,000 tests daily the magic number? Why not 5 million, or 100,000? The numbers that matter are hospitalizations (now ~flat) and the true IFR, which we can tell from PAST infections.

Coronavirus Testing Needs to Triple Before the U.S. Can Reopen, Experts Say

By Nash Collins April 17, 2020

As some governors consider easing social distancing restrictions, new estimates by researchers at Harvard University suggest that the United States cannot safely reopen unless it conducts more than three times the number of coronavirus tests it is currently administering over the next month.

An average of 148,000 people per day have been tested for the coronavirus nationally so far this month, according to the COVID Tracking Project, which on Friday reported 3.6 million total tests across the country. To

It's increasingly clear the focus on widespread testing (as opposed to widespread ANTIBODY testing) is a sideshow designed to delay reopening and take the focus away from the empty hospitals. It's another version of wait two weeks.

I have to say I find bizarre the blue-check trope that @realdonaldtrump disrespected people who have died of #Covid by saying we shouldn't fear it. 500,000 Americans die of cancer every year. No one says the "stand up to cancer" campaign is wrong or minimizes their anguish...

2/ This is a huge figure, beginning to approach herd immunity. Chelsea is much more like New York City than a lot of other American towns and suburbs - densely packed - and this kind of number could be a precursor if what NYC antibody testing would show.

Nearly a third of 200 blood samples taken in Chelsea show exposure to coronavirus

Mass. General researcher says the results point to a 'raging epidemic,' but may also indicate the city is further along the disease curve than some other municipalities

Stern Smiley @HiTonedBumpkeen · Apr 21

It sounds like it's been here longer and before quarantined, so it's probably a bit more widespread, and this would lower the effective fatality rate by raising the total number of infected without having an effect on number of deaths of course.

In other words, this is really a paper about China (as the authors basically admit - they say on page 2 that they lack "sufficient data" for detailed estimates of changes over time in any other country).

Further, the authors make NO effort to compare the #COVID spread in countries that DID use lockdowns with those that didn't... they merely track the infection rate by day and assume any changes resulted from lockdowns (note to @ft - I got your tautology right here)...

And further, their own analysis shows that lockdowns reduced the speed of spread by less than 40% everywhere (about 30% in the US) - meaning spread was still very rapid post-lockdown. Even worse, when they look at individual policies in the United States...

Nobody says COVID-19 is not real, that it can't tax hospitals or kill people, esp. if they are over 75 or have comorbidities. But right now the best CURRENT projection is for 61,000 US deaths. That was the 2017 flu season. Why have we shut the country?

The California Department of Public Health and the CDC did not begin community surveillance for COVID-19 in Santa Clara County until March 5. Samples were collected from 226 coughing, feverish patients who visited four urgent care centers; 1 in 4 turned out to have the flu. The state tested samples from a subset of 79 non-flu patients. Nine of them had COVID-19.

The result suggested that 8% of people walking into the urgent care centers carried the novel coronavirus, an

Like child abuse, domestic violence appears to be surging during the lockdowns:

> Calls to UK Domestic Abuse Helplines have more than doubled since the lockdown. Victims should know that if they are in danger, they can dial 999, then press 55 and remain silent. Police will know that the caller is in danger and cannot speak. Spread this wide.

where and how SARS-CoV-2 is transmitted. Methods: Case reports were extracted from the local Municipal Health Commissions of 320 prefectural cities (municipalities) in China, not including Hubei province, between 4 January and 11 February 2020. We identified all outbreaks involving three or more cases and reviewed the major characteristics of the enclosed spaces in which the outbreaks were reported and associated indoor environmental issues. Results: Three hundred and eighteen outbreaks with three or more cases were identified, involving 1245 confirmed cases in 120 prefectural cities. We divided the venues in which the outbreaks occurred into six categories: homes, transport, food, entertainment, shopping, and miscellaneous. Among the identified outbreaks, 53.8% involved three cases,

2/ Kids with special needs are particularly hard hit.

In response to your query about children who are being adversely affected by his lock down I wanted to share my experience.

I am a pediatric physical therapist working (and a co-owner) in a clinic that provides physical, occupational and speech therapy services to children with various disabilities including cerebral palsy, autism spectrum disorder and various genetic and neurological diagnoses. We have been deemed an essential service and have kept our doors open after modifying the environment with enhanced sanitation and a "virtual" waiting room. However, the parents of our children are being told that their children are at very high risk to develop complications if their child contracts Covid-19. I have been unable to find any

The fact that these children are not receiving their therapies is doing them and their families harm. Children with CP who do not get therapy are at risk to develop musculoskeletal problems that could require surgery and they will lose functional abilities (like independent walking) as they lose range of motion and strength. Children with autism are becoming disregulated without their therapies resulting in increased behavior problems and creating chaos in their families as they struggle to understand the changes on their schedule and lack appropriate interventions.

This has been weighing on my mind and I appreciate you asking for input. This is a small

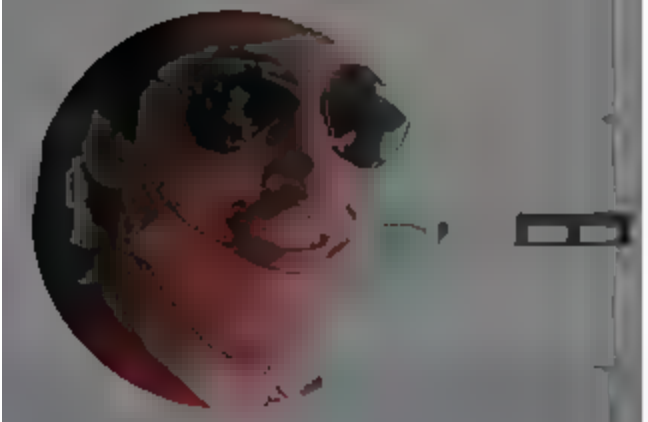
3/ Children with autism have had their routines disrupted and are having a difficult time adapting.

My name is and I am an Intervention Specialist (teach special ed). My own son is on the Autism spectrum, on the high functioning end. He has been struggling since this whole lockdown started. He is not a social butterfly, but he does enjoy time with school friends. He needs structure and predictability and that is clearly not happening now. I try to keep a certain structure to our days, but it's hard because I am working, my husband is working and his older brother has lots of schoolwork he also needs help with. The other thing Colin is struggling with is not understanding why he has to do schoolwork when he's not in school. There have been many meltdowns and I expect many more before all is said and done.

I've never like social media for children because I think it



I have a senior daughter in high school and a son who has autism and is in his first year of tech school. Both are having issues with extremely high anxiety and now I'm seeing depression.

Their social and emotional needs are taking a serious hit. My son's special needs friends are not receiving needed therapies and are having regressions due to the isolation as well.

My daughter's senior year is a wash, but she's still expected to take an AP exam next month. The digital learning is a joke - the platforms crash every day.

They both are working still - my son at a grocery store and

I received several e-mails from students who told me that their parents are not allowing them to go outside AT ALL. These kids, who are already dealing with the normal struggles of being teenagers, and who are doing so in a time of significantly increased mental health problems and take them, and I'm very worried that they're "learning" during all of this that their parents are cruel and that we don't want them around any longer since I have to keep telling them they can't go anywhere even when I do go shopping or something. We're doing our best and they seem ok even as they're getting more and more

2/ Kids with special needs are particularly hard hit.

In response to your query about children who are being adversely affected by his lock down I wanted to share my experience.

I am a pediatric physical therapist working (and a co-owner) in a clinic that provides physical, occupational and speech therapy services to children with various disabilities including cerebral palsy, autism spectrum disorder and various genetic and neurological diagnoses. We have been deemed an essential service and have kept our doors open after modifying the environment with enhanced sanitation and a "virtual" waiting room. However, the parents of our children are being told that their children are at very high risk to develop complications if their child contracts Covid-19. I have been unable to find any

The fact that these children are not receiving their therapies is doing them and their families harm. Children with CP who do not get therapy are at risk to develop musculoskeletal problems that could require surgery and they will lose functional abilities (like independent walking) as they lose range of motion and strength. Children with autism are becoming disregulated without their therapies resulting in increased behavior problems and creating chaos in their families as they struggle to understand the changes on their schedule and lack appropriate interventions.

This has been weighing on my mind and I appreciate you asking for input. This is a small

So then don't go out. But let those of us who are ready go out. Extend the provision to owners/employees: If you aren't ready, stay home. Businesses won't be at full capacity anyway

Fun fact from the @cdcgpv surveillance data: of 4,000 #COVID hospitalizations for which they provide detailed age data, 29 were in people under 18. That's not deaths or ICU visits - that's hospitalizations. The closing of the schools is nearly criminal at this point.

Abstract Info & story

where and how SARS-CoV-2 is transmitted. Methods: Case reports were extracted from the local Municipal Health Commissions of 320 prefectural cities (municipalities) in China, not including Hubei province, between 4 January and 11 February 2020. We identified all outbreaks involving three or more cases and reviewed the major characteristics of the enclosed spaces in which the outbreaks were reported and associated indoor environmental issues. Results: Three hundred and eighteen outbreaks with three or more cases were identified, involving 1245 confirmed cases in 120 prefectural cities. We divided the venues in which the outbreaks occurred into six categories: homes, transport, food, entertainment, shopping, and miscellaneous. Among the identified outbreaks, 53.8% involved three cases,

Btw: missed this yesterday, but @GovofCO is ending the Colorado lockdown on May 1 - retail, offices, then bars and restaurants by mid-May. Believe he is the first Democratic governor to take this step. Wonder why no one is screaming about the imminent Rocky Mountain apocalypse.

Some Colorado businesses can reopen May 1 as Polis shifts from stay-at-home to 'safer at home'

Retail businesses will be allowed to reopen May 1, though restaurants and schools will remain closed

April 20.

Retailers will have the option to open May 1, Polis said, as long as they observe social-distancing policies in place. Business offices can reopen the following Monday, May 4, he said, although he added telecommuting should be maximized as much as possible, particularly with older employees.

Restaurants and bars will stay closed initially but might be allowed to open in mid-May, he said. Schools will not reopen immediately. Personal service providers, like hair salons, will be able to reopen with some precautions on April 27, such as hair stylists wearing gloves. Gun, commercial real estate showings – though not open houses – and child care can restart then, too.

I received several e-mails from students who told me that their parents are not allowing them to go outside AT ALL. These kids, who are already dealing with the normal struggles of being teenagers, and who are doing so in a time of significantly increased mental health problems and take them, and I'm very worried that they're "learning" during all of this that their parents are cruel and that we don't want them around any longer since I have to keep telling them they can't go anywhere even when I do go shopping or something. We're doing our best and they seem ok even as they're getting more and more

2/ Kids with special needs are particularly hard hit.

In response to your query about children who are being adversely affected by his lock down I wanted to share my experience.

I am a pediatric physical therapist working (and a co-owner) in a clinic that provides physical, occupational and speech therapy services to children with various disabilities including cerebral palsy, autism spectrum disorder and various genetic and neurological diagnoses. We have been deemed an essential service and have kept our doors open after modifying the environment with enhanced sanitation and a "virtual" waiting room. However, the parents of our children are being told that their children are at very high risk to develop complications if their child contracts Covid-19. I have been unable to find any

The fact that these children are not receiving their therapies is doing them and their families harm. Children with CP who do not get therapy are at risk to develop musculoskeletal problems that could require surgery and they will lose functional abilities (like independent walking) as they lose range of motion and strength. Children with autism are becoming disregulated without their therapies resulting in increased behavior problems and creating chaos in their families as they struggle to understand the changes on their schedule and lack appropriate interventions.

This has been weighing on my mind and I appreciate you asking for input. This is a small

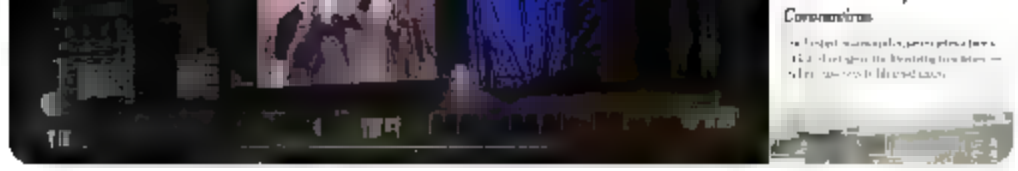
3/ Children with autism have had their routines disrupted and are having a difficult time adapting.

My name is and I am an Intervention Specialist (teach special ed). My own son is on the Autism spectrum, on the high functioning end. He has been struggling since this whole lockdown started. He is not a social butterfly, but he does enjoy time with school friends. He needs structure and predictability and that is clearly not happening now. I try to keep a certain structure to our days, but it's hard because I am working, my husband is working and his older brother has lots of schoolwork he also needs help with. The other thing Colin is struggling with is not understanding why he has to do schoolwork when he's not in school... there have been many meltdowns and I expect many more before all is said and done.



I've never like social media for children because I think it

I have a senior daughter in high school and a son who has autism and is in his first year of tech school. Both are having issues with extremely high anxiety and now I'm seeing depression.

Their social and emotional needs are taking a serious hit. My son's special needs friends are not receiving needed therapies and are having regressions due to the isolation as well.

My daughter's senior year is a wash, but she's still expected to take an AP exam next month. The digital learning is a joke - the platforms crash every day.

They both are working still - my son at a grocery store and

In turn, this raises real questions about whether some of the apparent gap between Japan and Europe is real or an artifact of media/government reporting (look for an epidemic in nursing homes, you find one; don't and you don't?). Very hard to know.

Fun fact from the @cdcgpv surveillance data: of 4,000 #COVID hospitalizations for which they provide detailed age data, 29 were in people under 18. That's not deaths or ICU visits - that's hospitalizations. The closing of the schools is nearly criminal at this point.

Nobody says COVID-19 is not real, that it can't tax hospitals or kill people, esp. if they are over 75 or have comorbidities. But right now the best CURRENT projection is for 61,000 US deaths. That was the 2017 flu season. Why have we shut the country?

Oh that is terrible. Sweden is up to 50 new positive tests (let's not call them cases, let's try to be accurate) and ~0 deaths per million people. That must be way worse than countries like Spain and France, which took the hard lockdown route, right?

So @nytimes has a big story right now about a @fema model showing up to 300,000 deaths. The documents are "dated April 9," the story says. So they must account for everything we've learned this week - which would be bad news. But what the chart actually says: "Models from 3/31."

spike in infections if shelter in place orders are lifted at 30 days.

Stay-at-home orders, school closures and social distancing greatly reduce infections of the coronavirus, but lifting those restrictions after just 30 days will lead to a dramatic infection spike this summer and death tolls that would rival doing nothing, government projections indicate.

The projections obtained by The New York Times come from the departments of Homeland Security and Health and Human Services. The models use three scenarios. The first has policymakers doing nothing to mitigate the spread of the coronavirus. The

You may understand why this matters - but if not - the [redacted] projections have been changed THREE times since March 31 (resulting in sharp cuts in hospitalization/ICU projections). If this were actually made yesterday, it would be frightening. Instead it's just out of date.

The @IHME_UW model vs reality for New York State, April 5. The model is less accurate than ever. 69K beds projected, 16.5K actually needed; 12,346 ICU beds projected, 4376 needed. Even better (tho not for the model), overall bed count rose less than 600 statewide - less than 4%.

Which raises the question: If the models are useless, what do we do now?

In other words, this is really a paper about China (as the authors basically admit - they say on page 2 that they lack "sufficient data" for detailed estimates of changes over time in any other country).

Further, the authors make NO effort to compare the #COVID spread in countries that DID use lockdowns with those that didn't... they merely track the infection rate by day and assume any changes resulted from lockdowns (note to @ft - I got your tautology right here)...

But without comparing countries that DIDN'T lock down to those that did, they have no way of knowing if the decrease from the early rapid spread simple represents the natural and normal track of the virus...

And further, their own analysis shows that lockdowns reduced the speed of spread by less than 40% everywhere (about 30% in the US) - meaning spread was still very rapid post-lockdown. Even worse, when they look at individual policies in the United States...

Further, the authors make NO effort to compare the [illegible] spread in countries that DID use lockdowns with those that didn't... they merely track the infection rate by day and assume any changes resulted from lockdowns (note to [illegible] - I got your tautology right here)...

They find almost no correlation between individual lockdown policies and ANY meaningful change in growth (to get around this little problem they create two catch-all categories called “other social distance” and “home isolation” which supposedly produce results.)

A bit of good news! Looks like Google isn't suppressing the Great Barrington Declaration anymore, at least in the US (and even if you type the name slightly incorrectly)

And it's up to 300,000 signatures. Wonder when it will reach seven figures.

This should be fun. A reader points out this fine piece: "We need to divert our focus away from... preventing systemic spread among healthy people, which is likely either inevitable, or out of our control..."

I couldn't agree more.

Alex, we botched the recommendations I was hoping would be enough.

Also, I've now seen that young healthy people are far, far more vulnerable than we then understood.

On that aspect, I was wrong—because we did not yet know enough.

It's important to change with the data.

Wait, "young, healthy people are far, far more vulnerable than we understood"? Your piece estimated an IFR of 0.2-0.4% in "healthy nongeriatic adults." That's 10-1000x the real risk (based on what we call young). That is: young, healthy people are far LESS vulnerable - not more.

"Thousands and thousands of young people have died since?" I suppose technically, if you define young as under 35, and since as the last seven months, and thousands and thousands as the bare minimum, 2,000 or more... NOPE. NOT EVEN THEN. (See next screenshot.)

This is awful. @nytimes is changing articles post-publication without telling readers. The only word is Orwellian. What's happened to the place I was so proud to work?? How can it pretend to have the moral authority to hold anyone to the truth when it acts this way?

case for making 1619 the country's "true" birth year was "always a metaphoric argument." I emailed her to ask if she could point to any instances before this controversy in which she had acknowledged that her claims about 1619 as "our true founding" had been merely metaphorical. Her answer was that the idea of treating the 1619 date metaphorically should have been so obvious that it went without saying.

She then challenged me to find any instance in which the project stated that "using 1776 as our country's birth date is wrong," that it "should not be taught to you that 1776 is the year of our nation's birth. What if, however, we were to tell you that this fact, which is taught in our schools and unanimously celebrated every Fourth of July, is wrong, and that the country's true birth date, the moment that its defining contradictions first came into the world, was in late August of 1619?"

Now compare it to the version of the same text as it now appears online:

"1619 is not a year that most Americans know as a notable date in our country's history. Those who do are at most a tiny fraction of those who did tell you that

Luckily we can blame the lack of the predicted catastrophic second wave from reopening too soon on the weather and the money can make a bunch of money

1/ Hey, wonder why @cnn and the rest of Team Apocalypse are screaming so hard about new "cases" (aka positive tests, which are actually falling nationally, btw)? It might because daily US Covid deaths have fallen two-thirds in six weeks. True story, not that you've heard it...

Dr. Kang: Awful news. Don't suppose you could share the names of these doctors, or maybe their ages/residency locations?

I ask only bc I can't find media reports of these deaths; I expected heavy coverage given the focus on outlier cases.

Also, can you tell us more about you?

Note: there is one person whose name seems to have been shared publicly on Twitter (it's in the Kang thread), and the name matches that of a real person; but I am not going to mention it as I can't find an official obituary, much less a cause of death.

Nobody says COVID-19 is not real, that it can't tax hospitals or kill people, esp. if they are over 75 or have comorbidities. But right now the best CURRENT projection is for 61,000 US deaths. That was the 2017 flu season. Why have we shut the country?

Turns out the Icelandic #COVID data shows almost the exact fatality rate of the new German data: about 1 in 300 - 6 deaths in 1648 positive tests). Somewhat worse than the flu, though other data suggests the flu is much MORE dangerous to the young.

Even if news organizations do not report the truth (whatever it turns out to be), scientists will one day - hopefully one day soon - make good use of that dataset. The with/from question is one of the crucial issues around #sars-cov-2, and we need all the information we can get.

Fun fact from the @cdcgpv surveillance data: of 4,000 #COVID hospitalizations for which they provide detailed age data, 29 were in people under 18. That's not deaths or ICU visits - that's hospitalizations. The closing of the schools is nearly criminal at this point.

Listen

Q&A about school restrictions due to COVID-19

Polski | Icelandic

Answers to common questions about how schools are operating under restrictions due to the COVID-19 epidemic. Updated May 5th, 2020.

See also:

schools can then continue as normal, as neither the number of people nor the distance rules will apply to children of kindergarten and primary school age. This also applies to the leisure activities of children of kindergarten and primary school age, e.g. sports, youth and leisure activities and music education.

Students in upper secondary schools and universities may resume attending class in their school buildings, but there are limits to the number of people; no more than 50 individuals may be in the same area in those schools, and caution must be taken to maintain the 2-metre distance between individuals.

If the lockdown state school restrictions continue into next year, the US will be at a large and increasing gap in international education; it is ironic but probably not coincidental that big cities with troubled school systems may be hardest hit.

Andre Guest died of #Covid. (Maybe. He had uncontrolled diabetes and shockingly high blood sugar.)

IN APRIL.

Since then thousands of US teens have died - 1,000 in car crashes alone.

The refusal to let go of "social distancing" rules despite abundant evidence it's useless in stopping transmission makes it clear this is being used to set a precedent that people shall no longer be permitted to gather in large numbers.

The @imperialcollege paper that @nature published today - the one claiming lockdowns saved 3 million lives in Europe - is a joke too. Three big clues (not including the fact it's from Imperial College and has Professor Pecker as a coauthor, which is dispositive by itself):

Fun fact from the @cdcgpv surveillance data: of 4,000 #COVID hospitalizations for which they provide detailed age data, 29 were in people under 18. That's not deaths or ICU visits - that's hospitalizations. The closing of the schools is nearly criminal at this point.

The @imperialcollege paper that @nature published today - the one claiming lockdowns saved 3 million lives in Europe - is a joke too. Three big clues (not including the fact it's from Imperial College and has Professor Pecker as a coauthor, which is dispositive by itself):

3/ To make the numbers work, they theorize transmissibility falls IMMEDIATELY by as much as 80% ON THE DAY LOCKDOWN is imposed (not before, not after, that day) - but then, weirdly, starts to rise again before tapering off. So infections look like this everywhere, even Sweden...

The underlying cause depends upon what and where conditions are reported on the death certificate. However, the rules for coding and selection of the underlying cause of death are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.

What happens if certifiers report terms other than the suggested terms?
If a death certificate reports coronavirus without identifying a specific strain or explicitly specifying that it is not COVID-19, NCHS will ask the states to follow up to verify whether or not the coronavirus was COVID-19.

And there's a lot of evidence that many kids regress during the normal summer break - and that poor kids especially suffer, because their parent(s) may not have the time or resources to help them.

In a normal investigative reporting world the biggest question being chased right now might be how the guy who predicted "mad sheep" and nine-figure bird flu deaths and whose model depends on 13-year-old code he hasn't released somehow has the ear of the world's governments.

But hey, @neil_ferguson says everybody loves his code! And he's not biased at all!

(Actually he didn't even say that, he said the people he'd allowed to see it were "largely positive." Oh. Talk about a ringing endorsement.)

In other words, this is really a paper about China (as the authors basically admit - they say on page 2 that they lack "sufficient data" for detailed estimates of changes over time in any other country).

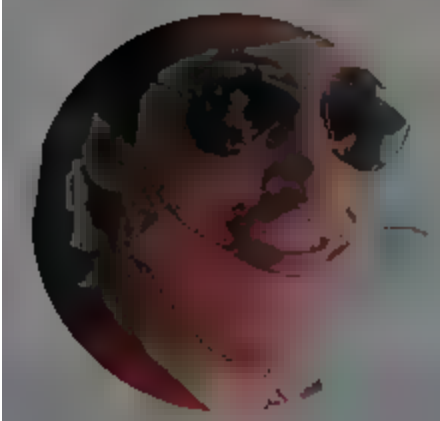
Further, the authors make NO effort to compare the [illegible] spread in countries that DID use lockdowns with those that didn't... they merely track the infection rate by day and assume any changes resulted from lockdowns (note to [illegible] - I got your tautology right here)...

9 86 500

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · 8. jun.

But without comparing countries that DIDN'T lock down to those that did, they have no way of knowing if the decrease from the early rapid spread simple represents the natural and normal track of the virus...



6 57 364

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · 8. jun.

And further, their own analysis shows that lockdowns reduced the speed of spread by less than 40% everywhere (about 30% in the US) - meaning spread was still very rapid post-lockdown. Even worse, when they look at individual policies in the United States...

FORECAST! (Forecasted sneaks in but it is not really proper.)

Of course, the real reason @IHME_UW still models is not because inaccurate forecasts are useful for policymakers but because the CNNs can use big numbers (400,000, 1.02 million, 86 trillion, hike!) to drive fear.

I'm of the opinion that masks cause more infection via cross contamination.

BTW: Making people wear masks when masks probably are useless isn't just intrusive. And it isn't potentially harmful because masks can get dirty and cause bacterial infections. It is also a distraction from the REAL issue around super-spreading - poor indoor ventilation...

As early as FEBRUARY (true story), China warned of aerosol transmission and told people to open their windows. Fixing indoor ventilation can be cheap (open windows) or costly (remake HVAC systems). But pretending masks are the answer just wastes time.

Overdoses appear to be up hugely nationally - 20-40 percent is a reasonable guess based on the states and cities that have reported. But although we obsessively count #Covid deaths, we don't bother to count overdoses for months, so we really have no idea.

Who wants to tell @Maddow that South Dakota's hospitals are now 34% empty, and ICUs 39% empty?

Testing doesn't fill the hospitals per se but it can cause people in for other reasons to be classified as #Covid cases (pregnant women, say). But that may be too hard to understand.

In its endless search for #Covid crises, the media has been reduced to pretending that South Dakota is in trouble. SD has 300 hospitalized #covid patients statewide. That's fewer than many SINGLE hospitals in New York had in April.

The kind of insane reporting that is driving the panic: Arizona didn't reduce its request for ventilators because the stockpile is "dwindling" (remember, California just sent back 500 ventilators!) - it reduced its request because IT WON'T NEED THEM.

GLENDALE, Ariz (AP) — With little hope of getting the 5,000 ventilators it requested from the dwindling national stockpile, Arizona has revised its request down to fewer than the 500 it expects to need soon to treat coronavirus patients, the state's health director said.

Most of the ventilators would be used to equip a Phoenix hospital that shut down last year but is being reopened as an acute care facility, Health Services Department Director Dr. Cara Christ said in an interview. About 50 would be sent to the Navajo Nation, where a severe BTW: could the designers have come up with a less appealing photo or cover design? If a Trump book were this ugly people would say it had been deliberately sabotaged.

Need proof of tectonic shift the Great Barrington Declaration is driving? It's here in this wordy, woke, sciency, and far from compelling effort to present a competing statement.

The kind of insane reporting that is driving the panic: Arizona didn't reduce its request for ventilators because the stockpile is "dwindling" (remember, California just sent back 500 ventilators!) - it reduced its request because IT WON'T NEED THEM.

GLENDALE, Ariz (AP) — With little hope of getting the 5,000 ventilators it requested from the dwindling national stockpile, Arizona has revised its request down to fewer than the 500 it expects to need soon to treat coronavirus patients, the state's health director said.

Most of the ventilators would be used to equip a Phoenix hospital that shut down last year but is being reopened as an acute care facility, Health Services Department Director Dr. Cara Christ said in an interview. About 50 would be sent to the Navajo Nation, where a severe

And of course it is the height of hypocrisy- though no surprise - for journalists who scream about the Trump kids to pretend this isn't a big and real issue worthy of investigation.

I am not sure the northern Virginia schools story I am chasing will turn out to be correct, but the emails I've received already make clear -

Parents are beyond furious that these very expensive and supposedly well-run districts have no real plans to reopen in person full-time.

Know this: If you do not fight back now - filing lawsuits, protesting board meetings, trying to recall board members, considering mass dismissals of teachers who will not do their jobs - YOUR CHILDREN MAY LOSE ANOTHER ENTIRE YEAR OF SCHOOL.

Are you okay with that?

Hear me out, this is gonna sound crazy: It's almost as if contact tracing and making a huge deal out of a flu-like respiratory illness is an utter waste of resources in a group of mostly healthy adults who are very likely to have few or any serious complications.

COVID-19 Alert No. 2
March 24, 2020

New ICD code introduced for COVID-19 deaths
This email is to alert you that a newly-introduced ICD code has been implemented to accurately capture mortality data for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) on death certificates.

Please read carefully and forward this email to the state statistical staff in your office who are involved in the preparation of mortality data, as well as others who may receive questions when the data are released.

What is the new code?
The new ICD code for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) is U07.1, and below is how it will appear in formal tabular list format.

U07.1 COVID-19
Excludes: Coronavirus infection, unspecified site (B34.2)
Severe acute respiratory syndrome [SARS], unspecified (U04.9)

The WHO has provided a second code, U07.2, for clinical or epidemiological diagnosis of COVID-19 where a laboratory confirmation is inconclusive or not available. Because laboratory test results are not typically reported on death certificates in the U.S., NCHS is not planning to implement U07.2 for mortality statistics.

When will it be implemented?
Immediately.

Will COVID-19 be the underlying cause?
The underlying cause depends upon what and where conditions are reported on the death certificate. However, the rules for coding and selection of the underlying cause of death are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.

What happens if certifiers report terms other than the suggested terms?
If a death certificate reports coronavirus without identifying a specific strain or explicitly specifying that it is not COVID-19, NCHS will ask the states to follow up to verify whether or not the coronavirus was COVID-19.

2/ I would make a couple of points - it glides over just how concentrated the excess mortality risk appears to be in the very old and sick.Why isn't our focus on protecting THOSE folks rather than going immediately to lockdowns - which are hugely destructive by any measure?

3/ And while acknowledging the economic crisis, Vance more or less throws up his hands, saying that it would have happened anyway. But the difference between voluntary social distancing and what we have now is the distance between recession and depression. That's no exaggeration.

4 23 151

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · 8 apr

4/ Vance broadly ignores all the non-economic effects of the lockdown too - closing schools, even though kids don't appear to be at risk - and the general fraying of society that has already begun, social shaming, neighbors calling out the police on neighbors...

5/ And the move to continue to extend the lockdowns even in places that have seen no epidemic. The longer this continues, the harder it is to fix the economy and society. We have difficult choices to make, but the media panic and focus on outlier cases does not help

6/ Finally - the choices we DO make cannot have as our primary goal zero new infections or deaths. That is an unrealistic standard and we don't apply it to influenza or TB or other diseases with high overall mortality. Our focus should be avoiding surges and health-system strain.

What happens if certifiers report terms other than the suggested terms?
If a death certificate reports coronavirus without identifying a specific strain or explicitly specifying that it is not COVID-19, NCHS will ask the states to follow up to verify whether or not the coronavirus was COVID-19.

1/ As you sit home watching #COVID death counts spiral, please know the official @CDCgov guidance for coding COVID-related deaths is as follows: any death where the disease "caused or is assumed to have caused or contributed to death." Confirmed lab tests are not required...

NVSS National Vital Statistics System

COVID-19 Alert No. 2
March 24, 2020

New ICD code introduced for COVID-19 deaths
This email is to alert you that a newly-introduced ICD code has been implemented to accurately capture mortality data for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) on death certificates.

Please read carefully and forward this email to the state statistical staff in your office who are involved in the preparation of mortality data, as well as others who may receive questions when the data are released.

What is the new code?
The new ICD code for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) is U07.1, and below is how it will appear in formal tabular list format.

U07.1 COVID-19
Excludes: Coronavirus infection, unspecified site (B34.2)
Severe acute respiratory syndrome [SARS], unspecified (U04.9)

The WHO has provided a second code, U07.2, for clinical or epidemiological diagnosis of COVID-19 where a laboratory confirmation is inconclusive or not available. Because laboratory test results are not typically reported on death certificates in the U.S., NCHS is not planning to implement U07.2 for mortality statistics.

When will it be implemented?
Immediately.

Will COVID-19 be the underlying cause?
The underlying cause depends upon what and where conditions are reported on the death certificate. However, the rules for coding and selection of the underlying cause of death are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.

What happens if certifiers report terms other than the suggested terms?
If a death certificate reports coronavirus without identifying a specific strain or explicitly specifying that it is not COVID-19, NCHS will ask the states to follow up to verify whether or not the coronavirus was COVID-19.

Fair point but I would say we blew it twice; we fought the war and THEN walked away. People have put our treatment of native Americans on the list, which also seems fair.

The @imperialcollege paper that @nature published today - the one claiming lockdowns saved 3 million lives in Europe - is a joke too. Three big clues (not including the fact it's from Imperial College and has Professor Pecker as a coauthor, which is dispositive by itself):

Turns out the Icelandic #COVID data shows almost the exact fatality rate of the new German data: about 1 in 300 - 6 deaths in 1648 positive tests). Somewhat worse than the flu, though other data suggests the flu is much MORE dangerous to the young.

Nobody says COVID-19 is not real, that it can't tax hospitals or kill people, esp. if they are over 75 or have comorbidities. But right now the best CURRENT projection is for 61,000 US deaths. That was the 2017 flu season. Why have we shut the country?

The takeaway: New York hospitals are very busy but functioning well (thanks to great medical staff!). Patients who need to be admitted are admitted, those who are not are sent home, there is no ventilator shortage and no prospect of one. Even in NYC the acute crisis has passed.

1/ Time to talk about the #Covid spike in Europe, which has been coming for a while (see below).

Yesterday France reported 30,600 positive tests - a huge number, equal to 160,000 in the US. That's double the number (per-capita) the US reported at the peak of the summer spike...

> 1/ Don't look now but within a couple of weeks some European countries - notably France - may be running ahead of the US in new per-capita #Covid deaths. Right now France is just behind the US in new positive tests per capita...

After the big WHO trial shows no benefit for remdesivir in #Covid, a top health-policy expert says @gilead_sciences must either prove it works or (basically) give it away.

FACT CHECK: Why should doctors EVER prescribe a medicine if well-run trials show it doesn't help patients?

What are they doing with hydroxychloroquine? The same should be done with remdesivir. NIAID just awarded a new remdesivir award too.

Remember two weeks ago today, when [redacted] caught the ro and died and they built a cyborg to replace him over the weekend?

That was crazee! But we all know he couldn't have recovered from the worst plague since the Spanish flu or the Black Death or whatever in 72 hours!

Further, the authors make NO effort to compare the [illegible] spread in countries that DID use lockdowns with those that didn't... they merely track the infection rate by day and assume any changes resulted from lockdowns (note to [illegible] - I got your tautology right here)...

But without comparing countries that DIDN'T lock down to those that did, they have no way of knowing if the decrease from the early rapid spread simple represents the natural and normal track of the virus...

And further, their own analysis shows that lockdowns reduced the speed of spread by less than 40% everywhere (about 30% in the US) - meaning spread was still very rapid post-lockdown. Even worse, when they look at individual policies in the United States...

The @IHME_UW model vs reality for New York State, April 5. The model is less accurate than ever. 69K beds projected, 16.5K actually needed; 12,346 ICU beds projected, 4376 needed. Even better (tho not for the model), overall bed count rose less than 600 statewide - less than 4%.

I don't understand the point of trying to drive panic with stories that are so misleading - and, frankly, so easily checked.

6/ Final point: the paper concludes the real bottleneck is in trained staff and "priority should focus not only on increasing [ventilators]... but on growing the number of trained professionals."

But I guess bashing the WH for not nationalizing ventilator production is more fun.

The underlying cause depends upon what and where conditions are reported on the death certificate. However, the rules for coding and selection of the underlying cause of death are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.

What happens if certifiers report terms other than the suggested terms?
If a death certificate reports coronavirus without identifying a specific strain or explicitly specifying that it is not COVID-19, NCHS will ask the states to follow up to verify whether or not the coronavirus was COVID-19.

1/ Morning folks. Wondering why @CDCgov is using such aggressive rules for death counts? Look - there's considerable evidence #COVID infections have peaked in the US. Even the POTUS comments last night warning about this being the "toughest week" suggest as much (deaths lag)...

2/ And the emerging data out of Florida, Southern California, etc suggest that this virus - like most respiratory viruses - doesn't do well when the weather warms and UV rays get stronger. Great news! Right? Right? Well... we're at under 9,000 deaths now.

64 203 762

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · 5. apr.

3/ Suppose the president is right. And this is the "toughest week." And we average 1,500 deaths a day. That gets us to almost 20,000 deaths by April 12. By then the trend should clearly be down, I don't think it will be arguable...

33 181 621

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · 5. apr.

4/ 20,000 deaths, with perhaps that many more coming over the next month (deaths lag). That's terrible! Yeah. It is. But [illegible] is estimating 24,000-63,000 flu deaths this year.

Why can't the US media and (blue-state) policymakers keep two ideas in mind at once? [illegible] can be dangerous, especially to the elderly - but to respond by denying kids an education (and generally wrecking the economy and society with lockdowns of dubious value) is a mistake.

Remember - it is only April 21. In most states, schools have been out for only about a month. Closing through the end of the school year means another TWO months of lost schooling, and a five-plus-month break overall...

And there's a lot of evidence that many kids regress during the normal summer break - and that poor kids especially suffer, because their parent(s) may not have the time or resources to help them.

So the poll is unscientific, but it's still striking - almost 1 in 5 people who've answered said they plan to leave lockdown states for free states as early as June 1. I don't think that's realistic for people with families - more of a wish - but it shows the depth of the anger.

> Serious poll question, please answer only if it applies to you: If you live in a state where lockdowns are likely to continue for some time, at what point would you plan on moving to a free state or at least renting a house there?

In a normal investigative reporting world the biggest question being chased right now might be how the guy who predicted "mad sheep" and nine-figure bird flu deaths and whose model depends on 13-year-old code he hasn't released somehow has the ear of the world's governments.

But hey, @neil_ferguson says everybody loves his code! And he's not biased at all!

(Actually he didn't even say that, he said the people he'd allowed to see it were "largely positive." Oh. Talk about a ringing endorsement.)

The percentage of people dying at home has risen notably, but Oregon's hospitals are empty - so this is not a capacity issue. People just aren't going to get treatment. Link:

I hate fighting about masks with people like Dr. Gawande. But he is wrong. The papers he offers barely rank as hypothesis-generating. The national data is impossibly confounded, the Harvard hospital paper doesn't even have a control group, and the others are mostly care reports.

> Atul Gawande @Atul_Gawande

By itself the @cdcgov September report that shows no benefit is stronger than all of those. At least it's care-controlled. And we DO have one GOOD randomized trial on mass this year. And guess what? The results have vanished. No points for guessing the most likely reason.

A lead investigator on the Danish mask study - the ONLY (as far as I know) randomized trial to see if masks protect from #COVID - was asked when it would be published.

His answer: “as soon as a journal is brave enough.”

If you think that means the study shows masks work...

The @IHME_UW model vs reality for New York State, April 5. The model is less accurate than ever. 69K beds projected, 16.5K actually needed; 12,346 ICU beds projected, 4376 needed. Even better (tho not for the model), overall bed count rose less than 600 statewide - less than 4%.

It's not just NY, either - people are pointing to many examples where the updated @IMHE_UW model does not match CURRENT public data. They had to know this would be scrutinized, given the fact the last version was so off on hospitalizations - how could they have taken it public?

If they had wanted to blow up whatever credibility their forecasts had left, it's hard to see how they could have done a better job.

Which raises the question: if the models are useless, what do we do now?

If @realdonaldtrump suppressed a clinical trial showing masks were effective, every news outlet and scientist would be screaming over interference in science.

So why the silence on the Danish mask study? Where is the outrage that the scientists can't find a journal to run it?

The presumption at this point must be that the paper shows either no or a NEGATIVE effect from mask use. Top journals have eagerly published much weaker papers showing that masks work; they would be desperate to run this one if it agreed.

And we already know that journals are suppressing other papers - on herd immunity, for example - that deviate from the preferred narrative. BUT THIS IS WORSE. This is not a model. It is a real-world trial with results that are crucially and immediately important.

Suppressing it is the strongest proof yet that the mainstream scientific community is leaving facts behind for politics. Which is almost unspeakably dangerous.

Nobody says COVID-19 is not real, that it can't tax hospitals or kill people, esp. if they are over 75 or have comorbidities. But right now the best CURRENT projection is for 61,000 US deaths. That was the 2017 flu season. Why have we shut the country?

4/ Vance broadly ignores all the non-economic effects of the lockdown too - closing schools, even though kids don't appear to be at risk - and the general fraying of society that has already begun, social shaming, neighbors calling out the police on neighbors...

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson

5/ And the move to continue to extend the lockdowns even in places that have seen no epidemic. The longer this continues, the harder it is to fix the economy and society. We have difficult choices to make, but the media panic and focus on outlier cases does not help.

6/ Finally - the choices we DO make cannot have as our primary goal zero new infections or deaths. That is an unrealistic standard and we don't apply it to influenza or TB or other diseases with high overall mortality. Our focus should be avoiding surges and health-system strain.

11 55 246

Philip Parkin @peparkin · 8

Very good point about the media focus on outlier cases. They're presenting this infection as though it's a death sentence when of course we know that the majority of people recover at home.

From Switzerland: Dr. Daniel Koch, a top Swiss public health official, says not only are kids at minimal risk from #COVID, bc they have such low viral loads, "it is adults who infect children, not the other way around."

Switzerland reopens schools May 11.

Thank god there are reasonable people out there. In MN we have gone from "flatten the curve to protect the hospitals from being overrun" to "protect every living being from coronavirus forever" it's fascist thinking by many democrat governors (like Tim Walz in MN)

We've closed schools because kids aren't the only ones in them.

But we definitely need to NOT wait until Sept. to reopen them.

The fact that these children are not receiving their therapies is doing them and their families harm. Children with CP who do not get therapy are at risk to develop musculoskeletal problems that could require surgery and they will lose functional abilities (like independent walking) as they lose range of motion and strength. Children with autism are becoming disregulated without their therapies resulting in increased behavior problems and creating chaos in their families as they struggle to understand the changes on their schedule and lack appropriate interventions.

This has been weighing on my mind and I appreciate you asking for input. This is a small

3/ Children with autism have had their routines disrupted and are having a difficult time adapting.

My name is and I am an Intervention Specialist (teach special ed). My own son is on the Autism spectrum, on the high functioning end. He has been struggling since this whole lockdown started. He is not a social butterfly, but he does enjoy time with school friends. He needs structure and predictability and that is clearly not happening now. I try to keep a certain structure to our days, but it's hard because I am working, my husband is working and his older brother has lots of schoolwork he also needs help with. The other thing Colin is struggling with is not understanding why he has to do schoolwork when he's not in school. There have been many meltdowns and I expect many more before all is said and done.

I have a senior daughter in high school and a son who has autism and is in his first year of tech school. Both are having issues with extremely high anxiety and now I'm seeing depression.

Their social and emotional needs are taking a serious hit. My son's special needs friends are not receiving needed therapies and are having regressions due to the isolation as well.

My daughter's senior year is a wash, but she's still expected to take an AP exam next month. The digital learning is a joke - the platforms crash every day.

Ppl who oppose reopening say it's too early, we're not ready—which is to say THEY aren't ready.

So then don't go out. But let those of us who are ready go out. Extend the provision to owners/employees: If you aren't ready, stay home. Businesses won't be at full capacity anyway

It's just like the flu, bro. Ask @CDCgov TBH I'm surprised they went there, but so be it. (Odds this page survives the night? Un-high.)

> According to the latest CDC COVIDView report, increases in hospitalization rates for COVID-19, which are cumulative, have started to level off. The hospitalization rate is highest among adults 65 and older and similar to what has been seen during a comparable time period during a recent high severity flu season: https://bit.ly/2ViFfIZ

Fun fact from the @cdcgpv surveillance data: of 4,000 #COVID hospitalizations for which they provide detailed age data, 29 were in people under 18. That's not deaths or ICU visits - that's hospitalizations. The closing of the schools is nearly criminal at this point.

Fun fact from the @cdcgpv surveillance data: of 4,000 #COVID hospitalizations for which they provide detailed age data, 29 were in people under 18. That's not deaths or ICU visits - that's hospitalizations. The closing of the schools is nearly criminal at this point.

It's just like the flu, bro. Ask @CDCgov TBH I'm surprised they went there, but so be it. (Odds this page survives the night? Un-high.)

> According to the latest CDC COVIDView report, increases in hospitalization rates for COVID-19, which are cumulative, have started to level off. The hospitalization rate is highest among adults 65 and older and similar to what has been seen during a comparable time period during a recent high severity flu season: https://bit.ly/2ViFfIZ

Particularly mealy-mouthed spin from @cdcgov here. The right interpretation of its September report isn't "more mask-wearers are getting infected" with #sarscov2 but that THE SAME PERCENTAGE of mask- and non-mask wearers became infected -

In other words, that masks are useless.

> CDC @CDCgov
> A recent @CDCMMWR looking at exposures among people w/ and w/o #COVID19 also assessed rates of mask use. However, the interpretation that more mask-wearers are getting infected compared to non-mask wearers is incorrect. bit.ly/MMWR91020b

Trump wants to try for herd immunity. Without a vaccine, it could kill millions.

The new White House strategy won't be able to protect vulnerable populations.

President Trump has long seemed fascinated with the idea that herd immunity could provide an easy end to the coronavirus pandemic, even before his own diagnosis with covid-19 and his blithe declaration after he checked himself out of the hospital that no one should be afraid of getting it. "With time, it goes away," he told an ABC News town hall last month. "And you'll develop — you'll develop herd like a herd mentality. It's going to be advice as the pandemic response over the summer. Scott Atlas, has argued that rising case counts will bring the nation to herd immunity faster.

Now the White House has turned this half-baked idea into an official strategy, calling it "focused protection." In this approach, the virus would be allowed to spread among young, healthy people with little attempt to slow it down, while officials try to keep older, more vulnerable

Someone has no idea how Big Pharma operates. (Some - not all but some - companies wouldn't market a medicine that they knew had serious side effects. But lack of efficacy as a reason not to proceed? Are you joking? If they can get it approved they will gladly sell it.)

Remember the early September prediction of 410k US deaths by January 1? 2500 people need to die every day for the remaining 74 days of the year to reach their goal. 7 day average is currently 718 and continues to trend downward.

Yes - despite the fact that the trials are usually cleverly designed to maximize measured efficacy - and are also often short-term trials for chronic conditions (this is especially true for psychiatric drugs).

This isn't a secret or conspiracy theory - it's how the game works.

Let's review Dr. Atlas's crimes.

1) He finds information. ("Obscure" information, natch!)
2) He refers to that information as data.
3) He tells the President about the information.

I can see why he needs to be fired.

Oooof. Six days post-release, Governor Cuomo's book has fallen to 2751 on Kindle. That's maybe 40 ebooks sold in the last day.

By way of comparison, Unreported Truths Part 2 - which came out August 4! - is at 2579.

But don't worry, gov. It's gonna be a huge holiday gift!

Introduction

I normally don't turn off my cellphone when I sleep, because the work of being governor is literally twenty-four hours a day, and the phone pings all night long. If I'm really tired, I will turn it off, but that doesn't mean people can't get me; it's just harder. My office phone is always answered, at night by a New York State trooper. Callers must convince the trooper that their issue is really important. Some troopers are easier to convince than others. Some troopers decide that it's safer to put all callers through, but as I joke to my team, those troopers learn quickly that it is not in fact

1/ I don't know enough about polling to know if this makes sense, but one line in it rings true:

Republicans seem to be underrepresented in polls (so pollsters overweight those who respond, which is tricky) - but Republicans who dislike Trump may not be.

Here's the Irish data. What's interesting is that the slope of the curves for both ICU patients and overall hospitalizations are actually notably shallower than they were in the spring. Which hasn't stopped the panic.

So much for the end of summer lessening violence in Chicago. The city averaged almost three murders and 10 shootings a day last week. It might get to 800 this year, the most in 25 years.

Obviously the answer is more bail reform and even progressiver prosecution.

Which is perfectly consistent with the statement that "an animal is its most likely source." Which means that statement is (intentionally?) meaningless.

Here's a fun fact.

Ralph Baric - who worked closely with the Wuhan researchers at the lab where Sars-Cov-2 definitely didn't leak - actually PATENTED a chimeric (genetically engineered) spike protein for coronavirus in 2015.

Twitter hive mind, quick question - there was a graph very recently showing the median age of death from (with?) Covid by country - I think the US was at 75.8, the European countries were higher. Can anyone point me to it?

Very good point about the media focus on outlier cases. They're presenting this infection as though it's a death sentence when of course we know that the majority of people recover at home.

Nobody says COVID-19 is not real, that it can't tax hospitals or kill people, esp. if they are over 75 or have comorbidities. But right now the best CURRENT projection is for 61,000 US deaths. That was the 2017 flu season. Why have we shut the country?

1/ So I don't want to go too far down the hole of arguing about #COVID death counts, but a reader pointed out a very odd change to the way Massachusetts is reporting deaths. Until April 6, the state reported deaths by day - that day, it reported 29. See below..

Long-Term Care Facilities Reporting At Least One Case of COVID-19	119
Hospitalization
Patient was hospitalized	1241
Patient was not hospitalized	3942
Under investigation	8654

Indoor transmission of SARS-CoV-2

Hua Qian, Te Miao, Li Liu, Xiaohong Zheng, Danrong Luo, Yuguo Li

doi: https://doi.org/10.1101/2020.04.04.20053058

This article is a preprint and has not been peer-reviewed [what does this mean?]. It reports new medical research that has yet to be evaluated and so should not be used to guide clinical practice.

Abstract

where and how SARS-CoV-2 is transmitted. Methods: Case reports were extracted from the local Municipal Health Commissions of 320 prefectural cities (municipalities) in China, not including Hubei province, between 4 January and 11 February 2020. We identified all outbreaks involving three or more cases and reviewed the major characteristics of the enclosed spaces in which the outbreaks were reported and associated indoor environmental issues. Results: Three hundred and eighteen outbreaks with three or more cases were identified, involving 1245 confirmed cases in 120 prefectural cities. We divided the venues in which the outbreaks occurred into six categories: homes, transport, food, entertainment, shopping, and miscellaneous. Among the identified outbreaks, 53.8% involved three cases,

Btw: missed this yesterday, but @GovofCO is ending the Colorado lockdown on May 1 - retail, offices, then bars and restaurants by mid-May. Believe he is the first Democratic governor to take this step. Wonder why no one is screaming about the imminent Rocky Mountain apocalypse.

Some Colorado businesses can reopen May 1 as Polis shifts from stay-at-home to 'safer at home'

Retail businesses will be allowed to reopen May 1, though restaurants and schools will remain closed

Retailers will have the option to open May 1, Polis said, as long as they observe social-distancing policies in place. Business offices can reopen the following Monday, May 4, he said, although he added telecommuting should be maximized as much as possible, particularly with older employees.

Holy moly, Batman. This study out of Japan (where testing is uncommon) suggests the real infection rate there is 400 to 800 times (!) the reported rate (and, like many European cities, Kobe, Japan had a 3% antibody rate by early April). medrxiv.org/content/10.110 …

In turn, this raises real questions about whether some of the apparent gap between Japan and Europe is real or an artifact of media/government reporting (look for an epidemic in nursing homes, you find one; don't and you don't?). Very hard to know.

To be clear: The Danish study is the most important research on masks. If it shows they don't work, we need to know, so we can try other solutions. If it shows they're harmful, we need to know, SO WE DON'T TELL PEOPLE TO WEAR THEM.

This was a study designed to answer the most important questions about prevention by measuring resulting infection. Most mask studies have been in the lab, or by retrospective questionnaire.

Virus gonna virus.

We can live with that reality and manage the consequences, mainly by making sure our hospitals are prepared (they are).

Or we can destroy our society for a virus that most people won't even know they have.

Those are our only choices.

If study shows masks are useless it has to come out so people will shift focus to something more useful.

If study shows masks are harmful or make infections more likely it is vital it becomes known ASAP and withholding publication is unethical and perhaps criminal.

A lead investigator on the Danish mask study - the ONLY (as far as I know) randomized trial to see if masks protect from #COVID - was asked when it would be published.

His answer: "as soon as a journal is brave enough."

If you think that means the study shows masks work...

Turns out the Icelandic #COVID data shows almost the exact fatality rate of the new German data: about 1 in 300 - 6 deaths in 1648 positive tests). Somewhat worse than the flu, though other data suggests the flu is much MORE dangerous to the young.

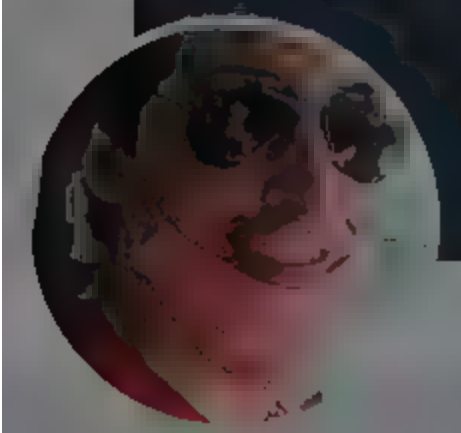
2/ And Europe has even more beds per capita - 400-800 per 100,000 people in most countries. Ro patients are filling 2-3% of those beds on average.



So where is the second wave "filling up" hospitals nationally in Europe? Right now, nowhere, not even the Czech Republic.

Answers to common questions about how schools are operating under restrictions due to the COVID-19 epidemic. Updated May 5th, 2020.

schools can then continue as normal, as neither the number of people nor the distance rules will apply to children of kindergarten and primary school age. This also applies to the leisure activities of children of kindergarten and primary school age, e.g. sports, youth and leisure activities and music education.

Students in upper secondary schools and universities may resume attending class in their school buildings, but there are limits to the number of people; no more than 50 individuals may be in the same area in those schools, and caution must be taken to maintain the 2-metre distance between individuals.

If the lockdown state school restrictions continue into next year, the US will be at a large and increasing gap in international education; it is ironic but probably not coincidental that big cities with troubled school systems may be hardest hit.

Fun fact from the @cdcgpv surveillance data: of 4,000 #COVID hospitalizations for which they provide detailed age data, 29 were in people under 18. That's not deaths or ICU visits - that's hospitalizations. The closing of the schools is nearly criminal at this point.

The refusal to let go of "social distancing" rules despite abundant evidence it's useless in stopping transmission makes it clear this is being used to set a precedent that people shall no longer be permitted to gather in large numbers.

When people wear masks, it reduces likelihood of spreading Covid if they're an asymptomatic or pre-symptomatic carrier. A new @Nature study finds if 85% of Americans wore masks, we would save 95,000 people. Greater adherence to masking will reduce spread.

So in essence the Wuhan lab could NOT have hidden its possession of a #sarscov2-like virus.

Alina Chan @Ayjchan
Antwort an @AlexBerenson

Yes, they published part of the sequence in 2016 under the name btCoV/4991. Once SARS2 genome was published on Jan 12 (the lab was shutdown for rectification), it would only be a matter of days before other scientists started saying: "WIV has something that 99% matches SARS2!"

The pangolin CoV data, unintentionally or otherwise, bolstered the intermediate host + wet market spillover narrative in early 2020. Both of these hypotheses - pangolins and wet market - have now fallen out of favor in light of zero evidence spillover occurred at Huanan market.

More panic out of Florida: the CEO of a major hospital system in central Florida (22,000 employees) says they have enough ICU beds, can add more, and have lots of PPE. And, oh yeah, death rates and length of ICU stay are dropping.

Did I say panic? I meant PANIC!

CORONAVIRUS

AdventHealth CEO: Our Florida ICUs Stocked, Prepared

BY JUSTIN SOTO | ORANGE COUNTY

seven Florida counties have less than 10 percent intensive care bed capacity.

What You Need To Know

- AdventHealth CEO says company's Florida ICUs are prepared
- Orange County AdventHealth ICU capacity at 25 percent
- PREVIOUS STORY: [illegible]

This comes as our daily coronavirus case counts continue to set records.

In Orange County, a state dashboard is reporting close to 550 COVID-19 related hospitalizations.

Adult ICU bed availability across all Orange County hospitals is currently at 24.93 percent. Shaw added ICU length of stay for coronavirus and the death rate have each dropped in half.

"We have adequate personal protective equipment," Shaw said. "We have a stockpile of ventilators, and we have an amazing clinical team that have taken best practices from around the world and put them into our treatment

Interesting NYT piece here showing Trump is gaining among black and Hispanic voters, losing whites; I ask again whether the polls might underestimate his support among non-whites, if the “shy Trump” issue might be even bigger there.

This is not correct. Wisconsin does not register voters by party. These are projections based on past voter behavior and modeling that are less reliable as big chunks of the two parties have switched sides in the past 4 years.

Fairfax has had suicide clusters before, notably at the elite W.T. Woodson High School in 2013; it is a high-pressure district (suburban DC) with large schools. The size of the district (<>60,000 high school students) means it's hard to know how much of an outlier this year is.

Wondering why?

One reason is parental pressure. Another might be the multiple recent student suicides in the district...

A) "Reducing medical visits?" That's an outcome now?

B) It let 1 patient in 25 avoid a visit. I want all the people who were screaming when Stephen Hahn confused relative and absolute risk reduction for plasma to speak up now. Or it's okay because $REGN doesn't work for Trump?

Devastating piece on the likely uselessness of remdesivir and the way Gilead maneuvered its approval here. Expect a similar one on $regn and MABs in about two months.

Reminder: drug companies are not your friends.

An example of why aggressive treatment in early/mild #Covid makes little sense. In this case, 66 of 72 people who received PLACEBO didn't have any clinically significant deterioration (as did 80 of 80 who got the study drug).

Remdesivir might be the best example. Besides the expense, it's a difficult drug - it requires hospitalization (or a "comparable" setting of care, per @US_FDA). It should be reserved for difficult cases. BUT IT HASN'T BEEN SHOWN TO REDUCE MORTALITY.

So what exactly is the point?

(And yes, remdesivir is supposed to be used only in cases where patients are hospitalized - but that's a Catch-22, since USING IT REQUIRES HOSPITALIZATION; i.e. if you are on the bubble you might be admitted so you can get it. Why not? It can't hurt, right? Unless it does.)

By the way: THIS IS INCREDIBLE.

The US economy is barely going to contract this year (the 4% estimate is now clearly too high). Many European countries will be down close to 10%.

The models have been wrong over and over and over. Not just because they're created by Team Apocalypse types desperate for Trump to lose (though that's part of it). Because predicting the future is HARD.

But messing it up is easy.

The place: Penn State.
The day: Saturday.
The crime: Tailgating.

No worries, @StateCollegePD is ON IT.

They need your help to identify the perps, though.

I wish I were making this up.

Four years of lockdown? That's not a dystopian thriller or a mutated ro. That's just what happens if we follow the sciencyists.

The first trailer for the Michael Bay-produced pandemic thriller Songbird has arrived

The movie imagines a dystopian future in which COVID-19 has mutated, keeping the world in lockdown for a fourth year. The film has an all-star cast, but not everyone seems ready for a pandemic-themed thriller.

2/ If something similar has happened in the swing states then all the Sunbelt toss-ups are probably (slightly!) favoring Trump. Which means it's down to PA and the Upper Midwest once again. Looks like that's what the campaigns think, too.

My guess is the latter - undecideds are by definition undecided and haven't voted yet. On the other hand Trump's ceiling is clearly below Biden's so heavy early voting presumably hurts him - maybe some of those folks wouldn't have bothered to show up for Election Day...

True. Trump would have to sweep the Rust Belt then, which would mean the polls would have to be even more wrong than 2016. Biden has a much cleaner path.

On the other other hand presumably early commitment to a candidate and passion to vote go together, so maybe the vast majority of those early voters would have voted no matter what. Seems like even the professional pollsters can't be sure.

I think having so many people vote early and by mail sets Trump up for success on election day because there won't be any lines or crowding, so nervous older people will still come out to vote.

My guess is that early voters were already cutterly committed to their candidate — and his gunning down someone on Fifth Avenue today wouldn't have fazed them in the slightest.

This seems realistic. The polls would have to be hugely wrong for Trump to have a shot in Michigan or Wisconsin. Minnesota might be a tiny wild card. But - again, unless the polls are off by 4 or more - Trump has to win every toss up.

So this poll is two weeks old, but it sums everything up. It's a PA House district @realdonaldtrump won by 10 in 2016.

There were two questions: Who are you voting for?
Biden 48, Trump 46
What about your neighbors?
Trump 51, Biden 34

We'll find out Tuesday who told the truth.

1/ It should come as no surprise that the most crucial and scariest fact in this New Yorker piece of panic porn is wrong: @johncassidy reports that 12,673 people "are hospitalized" in Florida with #coronavirus, up 4,000 in a month. Nope...

> John Cassidy @JohnCassidy

2/ 12,673 HAVE BEEN hospitalized in Florida since hospitalizations began in March. The vast majority of those patients are home now. Florida has never had over ~2,000 people hospitalized with [illegible], 3.5% of its total hospital beds. Which presents a slightly different picture.

It is truly astonishing that @realDonaldTrump - who, let's be honest, is one of the most selfish people on the planet - now stands for community, ordinary life, and hope -

While friendly @joebiden has become a symbol of masks and loneliness and fear.

Remember yesterday, when I published an email asking about possible double-counting of cases in Arizona? And then the state said no, it wasn't double-counting.

Must just be coincidence that the number of #Covid hospitalizations fell 300 and ventilator use plunged 25% overnight.

It's not just a few cities: homicides are up 10-50% year-over-year in practically every big city - Denver, Phoenix, Los Angeles, Boston, Houston, St. Louis, Miami - everywhere.

Forget the crack epidemic. Murder rates haven't gone this bad this fast since the late 1960s.

2/ Note also that NYT goes out of its way NOT to mention specific crowd sizes at @realdonaldtrump rallies, except for one smaller one that was clearly an outlier and one where state rules capped attendance. This is another way to mislead with selective facts.

I don't have a strong feeling about HCQ either way - at this point the ONLY drug proven to help is dex, with Vitamin D a weak second.

These were hospitalized patients. If therapies are going to matter, that's the setting where they should. (One reason to be suspicious of MABs.)

Try reading the whole paper. They case matched, 1 to 1, and found a 35% reduction in risk. And “cut deaths” = “reduced risk of mortality by” in 280 characters.

But please continue to be snarky. It just confirms my priors about you.

The public health establishment would be happy enough to take away ALL those freedoms. For a virus that is essentially harmless to most of us, causing no or very mild symptoms in most cases. A virus whose dangers are broadly in line with the flu.

And the kicker is that we don't even know if lockdowns and these other restrictions work at all. In fact, the explosion in transmission in Europe suggests otherwise. The coronavirus is not very dangerous to most of us, but it is highly contagious...

It cannot be eradicated without restrictions that would only make sense if it were the plague the media pretends.

Our choice, then: Hold on to the life we know, or watch as governments and experts and well-meaning billionaires and tech companies take it away, mandate by mandate.

I agree. Voters should know how badly public health types want to force another lockdown at a time when the United States has 1/3 as many #Covid deaths as it did in April, ~5% of hospital beds nationally are occupied by Covid patients, and the number of overdoses is soaring.

1/ Hoo boy. Dr. Anthony Fauci has some advice for us.

#Sars-Cov-2 is just the beginning. We're in a "pandemic era" now, friends.

What's the solution?

"Living in greater harmony with nature."

Ooh. I like harmony. I like nature. Tell me more, doc!

I can't find a statewide number online publicly so I am loathe to report the figure I've been given but it shows ballots from GOP registered voters have pulled well ahead statewide (after being down 100K at the close of early voting yesterday). The county data I find backs this..

Of course some Republicans will vote for Biden and vice-versa but this certainly puts the lie to the idea Biden would win FL easily, and has to throw any pollster who reported that in the last week in doubt not just in FL but everywhere.

1/ Remember @angie_rasmussen? Maybe not. I do, though. She's a @columbia virologist who about six weeks ago called me a liar to her followers. Liar's a naughty word to call anyone, especially a journalist. And by naughty I mean libelous. So I asked Dr. Rasmussen what she meant...

Dr. Angela Rasmussen

Alex Berenson is accusing me of using "a red-flag libel word" because I said he lied on FoxNews about #COVID19. He demands I provide evidence of these lies (though lol—he didn't take issue for all the other ways I've said he's full of shit).

Well, you asked for it, Alex.

Apparently this is the lesson the elites will take from tonight.

> Sewell Chan @sewellchan
> No matter the ultimate outcome, what's clear tonight is that the appeal of the strongman is real and enduring. The global right-wing authoritarian turn has not abated. It's not just the US. Liberal democracy worldwide facing giant headwinds.

Q: with 120MM votes in, @realdonaldtrump trails in the popular vote by about 1 percent - anyone know what that means the final number will likely be? I assume he'll slip as CA counts more, but how far? If he winds up only 2-3 points down nationally, the polls look even worse...

To get a battleground state or two wrong, okay. But the average national poll had @joebiden leading @realDonaldTrump by 8-9 points (per @fivethirtyeight), and that figure was basically stable for SIX MONTHS. (Little smaller in September - but bigger in October, no joke.)

These averages come from HUNDREDS of polls. And they were all wrong. WAY wrong. The only ones that were right were those the media tried to ignore as conservative - Trafalgar and Rasmussen (and the IBD tracker was close at the end).

At some point being wrong has to matter, no?

The elite media hates Trump. You know it, he knows it, we all know it. Fine. He's hate-able.

But this is not about your feelings anymore. It's about making sure BOTH that the election is fair AND people accept the results. If you give into your vitriol the costs will be huge.

1) Trump is a very strong favorite to win. He's just too far ahead in PA/WI/MI, and what happened in OH suggests those leads will hold up.

2) Because he's so far ahead the Democrats are going to come under immense pressure to concede, probably by the end of the week.

Astonishing chart here: it suggests Philadelphia mail-in ballots run roughly 19-1 in favor of @joebiden (his net margin looks to be about 90 percent).

2/ It is certainly possible the mail-in votes ran EVEN more heavily Democratic than the underlying electorate, but under normal circumstances you'd expect some upper bound.

Again, I am NOT talking about fraud. Just what looks like very effective electioneering.

Forget the noise about counting coming from the Trump camp - this is more interesting and has a specific number attached. If Trump does hold AZ (and NC and GA), then he needs only MI or PA (or WI plus NV).

In other words, winning AZ probably gets us back to a true toss-up...

Which throws us right back into the maze of recounts and lawyers and dueling press conferences. Great.

Though it is good to have the Trump side on record with a specific prediction about a contested GOP-held state; right or wrong, it's a checkable fact.

3/ But what about those drop-off ballots that haven't been counted? If they favor Trump as much as in-person voting, he probably wins. But if they lean Biden or are evenly spilt, Biden wins. Maybe the Trump camp has some real insight here, or maybe it's just guessing and hoping.

And yes, 88% voter turnout is high, but Wisconsin historically has close elections and high turnout - as high as 73% in 2004 - 14 points above the national average. The US is likely to have turnout in the 66-68% range nationally this year, so 88% would be high but not impossible.

On some level I'm not sure it matters as the turnout was certainly below the voting-age population, but it would still be nice to know - are the rolls just not purged very often?

I don't think people are stupid for disagreeing - I think they have different priorities on this issue; maybe they'll change their minds and maybe they won't.

With #Covid what the media can't seem to understand is that people allowed to have priorities other than zero deaths.

Comments on ballot harvesting from a reader - worth reading through. The fact is that the turnout in Wisconsin etc is... how do I put this... unusual. But that doesn't PROVE anything. Sometimes you steal it fair and square - ask the Astros.

Primary

Hi Alex,

Re your tweet about ballot harvesting, here are some additional thoughts. Ballot harvesting itself is neither inherently good nor bad. Like most things, the details matter.

At its most benign, ballot harvesting can be helpful if it helps people vote who would otherwise be unable – for example, people in hospitals or shut-in their homes. This is the scenario that is often used when advocates want to expand ballot harvesting, such as in California three years ago.

At its least benign, ballot harvesting makes it easier to engage in ballot fraud because there are fewer safe guards to protect the integrity of the ballot. For

Until you start asking, you don't know. But big news organizations are now simply ignoring major potential reporting lines (like the origin of the virus, the PCR threshold issue, and now this) because they are ideologically inconvenient.

I don't care how blue urban areas are. To say 20,000 or 100,000 voters chose one candidate and NONE the other breaks credulity. Maybe the manipulation is happening on the way in and is legal somehow, but reporters should at least ask how these batches are assembled and reported.

Twitter is suppressing this tweet. As far as I know I have never been openly suppressed before, apparently asking questions about voting patterns - not accusing anyone of anything! - is no longer acceptable.

I don't care how blue urban areas are. To say 20,000 or 100,000 voters chose one candidate and NONE the other breaks credulity. Maybe the manipulation is happening on the way in and is legal somehow, but reporters should at least ask how these batches are assembled and reported.

Twitter is suppressing this tweet. As far as I know I have never been openly suppressed before, apparently asking questions about voting patterns - not accusing anyone of anything! - is no longer acceptable.

> I don't care how blue urban areas are. To say 20,000 or 100,000 voters chose one candidate and NONE the other breaks credulity. Maybe the manipulation is happening on the way in and is legal somehow, but reporters should at least ask how these batches are assembled and reported.

Calling for reporters to ask questions is also unacceptable.

1/ Thought experiment: imagine @Joebiden were far ahead until huge batches of mail-in votes with ~NO Biden votes from rural counties flipped the election.

Do you think news organizations wouldn't send reporters out to knock on doors and ask about how those votes were collected?

BTW - lost in all of this is the fact PA is still VERY close. Biden has a net of 340,000 votes to be reported in counties where he's up, but Trump is up 165,000 - and his counties are mostly redder than Biden's are blue (except Philly). This was not true in MI at the same stage.

Results by county

We received more votes from Montgomery County. According to turnout estimates, around 520,000 votes remain in counties won by Hillary Clinton in 2016. Trump 2016 counties have around 180,000 votes left to report.

Meanwhile, from Arizona: Trump won the first batch of updated results by 18 points; there are 530,000 ballots remaining and he now trails by 79,000 votes. In other words, if the rest of the ballots break the same way, he wins by 15,000.

Arizona should NOT have been called.

11 p.m.: More results expected soon

Another batch of Maricopa County results is expected before 11:30 p.m.

The batch of results posted around 7 p.m. Wednesday consisted of about 76,000 Maricopa County ballots — likely early ballots sent to the county on Monday and Tuesday.

Trump won the batch of ballots by a roughly 58-40 margin, narrowing Biden's lead in Arizona to 79,000 votes, from more than 90,000.

Trump will need to replicate that performance across all the remaining 530,000 votes left to count in the state to overtake Biden.

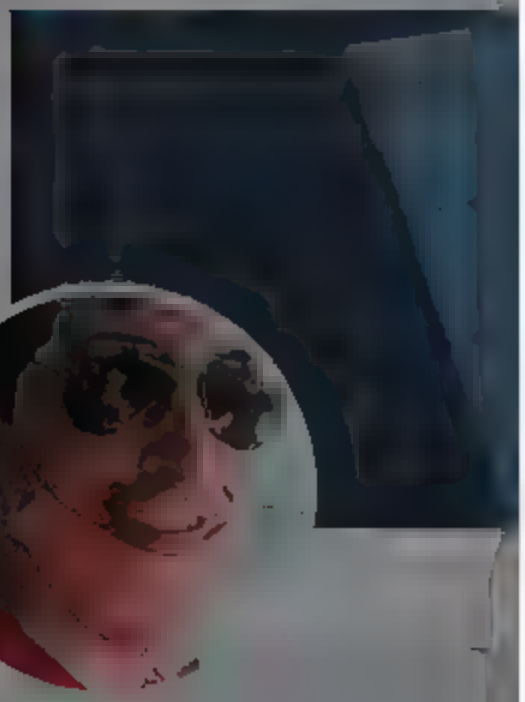
Yet because of the media's Russia-Trump obsession they have been taken seriously. Meanwhile, far more consequential questions about what the massive shift to vote-by-mail might mean here are immediately pegged as conspiracy theories.



The anti-Trump mindset infects everything.

And I feel I need to keep saying this: I AM NOT SAYING THE ELECTION WAS RIGGED, only that the US has a long history of not-always-legal efforts to increase turnout. It would be nice to know how vote-by-mail changed that. Or didn't.

the-vote money"?

By CHRISTOPHER BEAM

Philadelphia Democrats are anxious that the Obama campaign won't be handing out "street money" for the general election. "Honestly, they'd be crazy not to do it," said one ward leader. What's street money, and who gets it?

It's cash that's given to help get people to the polls. The money can go toward perks like coffee and doughnuts for door knockers, gas for volunteers to chauffeur elderly voters, or

It's cash that's given to help get people to the polls. The money can go toward perks like coffee and doughnuts for door knockers, gas for volunteers to chauffeur elderly voters, or pocket money for kids who distribute fliers and sample ballots on Election Day. Also known as "walking-around money" or "get-out-the-vote money," it's most common in poor areas of Philadelphia; Chicago; Newark, N.J.; Baltimore; Los Angeles; and other big cities. Both parties use street money, but it's more common among Democrats, who tend to be better represented in the areas that rely on it.

One thing we can all agree on: our voting process is terribly flawed. We don't need the Russians to mess up our counts - we do it just fine.

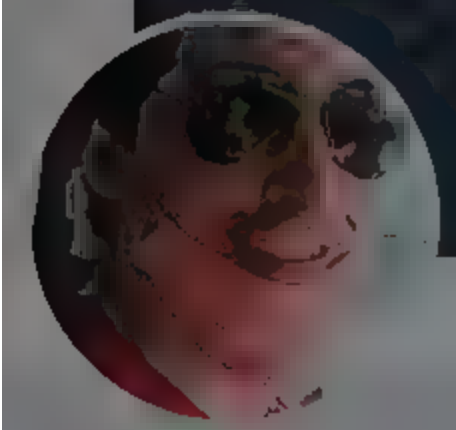
Its hypocrisy angered and energized Democrats and turned off independents -



And it was her nominating event that probably infected Trump, costing him two weeks of campaigning.

Not to mention the setting the media baying about how irresponsible he'd been. The nomination and those two weeks cost him 3 or 4 points and though he clawed them back it was (probably) a fraction too late.

BTW: the reason Trump is now expected to lose Pennsylvania is that estimated vote-by-mail totals have risen sharply since Election Day.

The estimate then was 2.5 million ballots. Two days later, it's almost 2.9 million.

That's the difference between a Trump and a Biden win.

The 2.18 million number on electionreturns.gov.pa MUST be right since those have actually been reported for each candidate... and the Secretary of State may be a bit slow about updating ballots left to be counted on that supplemental page.

1/ Three points on Pennsylvania: the mail-in ballots counted today are slightly less pro-Biden than yesterday, but they are still running at a pace to give Biden a narrow win. About 320,000 ballots remain, and Trump leads by 96,000 votes; a 70/30 split gives Biden a 30,000 win...

47 16 73

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · 5 Min.

2/ Now if Biden's edge CONTINUES to slip, for whatever reason, the game gets close. The break is roughly 65/35. And late ballots have generally run significantly more Republican than early ones. But Biden still has a big pile in Philly left to be counted...

3/ As for the issue of vote FRAUD - as opposed to vote harvesting or street money or other aggressive but legal tricks - the numbers in Philly don't really bear it out. Biden is ahead in Philly by 378,000 votes with about 88,000 mail-ins left...

4/ Those will break hugely for him - he will likely pick up another 75,000 to 80,000 votes. Which means he'll win Philly by 450,000 to 460,000, with an almost 20-1 edge in mail-in voting. That sounds impossible. But Hillary Clinton won Philly by 455,000 votes - and Obama by more.

BACK TO THE RO, WHERE I BELONG.

Because the blue states are lurching back into lockdown. Including Massachusetts, where ICUs are 47% empty and hospitals discharged more #Covid patients than they admitted yesterday.

Trump or Biden, the fight continues.

Kawasaki disease (KD), also known as Kawasaki syndrome, is an acute febrile illness of unknown etiology that primarily affects children younger than 5 years of age. The disease was first described in Japan by Tomisaku Kawasaki in 1967, and the first cases outside of Japan were reported in Hawaii in 1976.

Clinical signs include fever, rash, swelling of the hands and feet, irritation and redness of the whites of the eyes, swollen lymph glands in the

The refusal to let go of "social distancing" rules despite abundant evidence it's useless in stopping transmission makes it clear this is being used to set a precedent that people shall no longer be permitted to gather in large numbers.

Someone out there doesn't like crowds.

Answers to common questions about how schools are operating under restrictions due to the COVID-19 epidemic. Updated May 5th, 2020.

See also:

schools can then continue as normal, as neither the number of people nor the distance rules will apply to children of kindergarten and primary school age. This also applies to the leisure activities of children of kindergarten and primary school age, e.g. sports, youth and leisure activities and music education.

Students in upper secondary schools and universities may resume attending class in their school buildings, but there are limits to the number of people; no more than 50 individuals may be in the same area in those schools, and caution must be taken to maintain the 2-metre distance between individuals.

If the lockdown state school restrictions continue into next year, the US will be at a large and increasing gap in international education; it is ironic but probably not coincidental that big cities with troubled school systems may be hardest hit.

Fun fact: Massachusetts - which currently HAS A STATEWIDE CURFEW IN EFFECT - without explanation cut its count of hospitalized Covid patients by 24% from Sunday to Monday, from 613 to 469 (today's figure is 498, 7 for every 100,000 residents).

Data: it matters until it doesn't.

What domestic terrorism? Most of what I've seen lately is mostly peaceful terrorism in Portland.

Then there was this. Which was about a two-day story. I wonder why.

So far, the the share of the vote Trump's getting among provisionals looks a lot like the share he's getting among all ballots in a county. But there are a lot more provisionals in blue counties, e.g. 2.5% of the ballots in Philly are provisionals vs. 0.9% in red counties.

How Pennsylvania's provisional ballots look thus far

COUNTY	PROVISIONALS AS SHARE OF COUNTED BALLOTS	TRUMP SHARE OF 2-PARTY VOTE: PROVISIONAL BALLOTS	TRUMP SHARE OF 2-PARTY VOTE: ALL BALLOTS

It still looks like a long shot - it would have to be combined with a meaningful number of mail-ins being rejected for whatever reason. But the provisionals are a bit of a wild card.

In other words, this is really a paper about China (as the authors basically admit - they say on page 2 that they lack "sufficient data" for detailed estimates of changes over time in any other country).

Further, the authors make NO effort to compare the #COVID spread in countries that DID use lockdowns with those that didn't... they merely track the infection rate by day and assume any changes resulted from lockdowns (note to @ft - I got your tautology right here)...

But without comparing countries that DIDN'T lock down to those that did, they have no way of knowing if the decrease from the early rapid spread simple represents the natural and normal track of the virus...

And further, their own analysis shows that lockdowns reduced the speed of spread by less than 40% everywhere (about 30% in the US) - meaning spread was still very rapid post-lockdown. Even worse, when they look at individual policies in the United States...

And further, their own analysis shows that lockdowns reduced the speed of spread by less than 40% everywhere (about 30% in the US) - meaning spread was still very rapid post-lockdown. Even worse, when they look at individual policies in the United States...

Thank you for sharing this. I worked for an NPR station for years, and every day witnessed the commitment to fact checking, representation, and 0 tolerance for political bias in the workplace and certainly on the air. Heartbreaking that NPR is castigated as a liberal mouthpiece.

I posted this meta-analysis - from a peer-reviewed journal published by @cdcgov - a while back but it seems like a good time to do so again, this time with highlighting! For those of you who missed it, here's the takeaway: Masks are useless.

In our systematic review, we identified 10 RCTs that reported estimates of the effectiveness of face masks in reducing laboratory-confirmed influenza virus infections in the community from literature published during 1946–July 27, 2018. In pooled analysis, we found no significant reduction in influenza transmission with the use of face masks (RR 0.78, 95% CI 0.51–1.20; I^2 = 30%, p = 0.25) (Figure 2). One study evaluated the use of masks among pilgrims from Australia during the Hajj pilgrimage and reported no major difference in the risk for laboratory-confirmed influenza virus infection in the control or mask group (33). Two studies in university settings assessed the effectiveness of

The left controls tech/social media, old media (ex Fox), academia, Hollywood, and increasingly medicine. We should all be so marginalized.

Also, I'll tell you a secret: the major drivers of US violence are not Qanon idiots with AKs. Tho the media pretends otherwise (see above).

Btw: when I say "controls," I don't mean has a majority of seats/jobs/leadership positions in.

I mean actively makes clear that it will no longer tolerate other views and may punish dissenters with public shaming and/or failure to advance, demotion and even job loss.

We usually talk about the core geographic political divide in the US as the South versus everyone else but I'm starting to think the West Coast (especially from the Bay Area north) is the real outlier, a THC-fueled tech/woke utopia where no one needs cops or in-person schools.

None. Those of us on Team Reality would be thrilled if Uncle Joe left everyone alone and allowed our medical system to handle the casedemic, as it has done so far.

Not gonna happen, though.

In today's very special episode of There's Always Someone More Woke...

Best part is she thinks "No more articles in Vogue" and "No more workshops" are insults that will resonate. Angry woke Twitter is the greatest.

"Go workshop your mama" might be my new top insult, though.

Among the millions of examples of media bias, I'm struck right now by how coverage post-2016 focused relentlessly for years on Clinton supporters and their emotional trauma and Resistance efforts ... compared to second-class and disdainful treatment of 71 MILLION Trump voters.

2/ CUT TO: four years later. Trump didn't blow up the world or start any wars, the economy was just fine before Covid and outperformed Europe after, the stock market's at all time highs, our biggest Middle Eastern enemy is in deep trouble, Israel's making peace left and right...

3/ Even on #Covid, our numbers are indistinguishable from most of Europe.

Is the guy an insufferable jerk? Yep. That's why he lost. But I am so tired of hearing how we barely escaped fascism. It's nonsense, and the people spitting it are way more dangerous than @realdonaldtrump.

I think those of you who responded negatively to this message missed my point... it's not that the Bible is not worth reading - it's that blue-checks angrily quoting Bible verses at each other is more or less the opposite of being religiously aware. At least to me.

1/ We need to talk about Europe.

The Covid test numbers coming out are staggering: France just reported 85,000 positive tests IN A DAY - equal to 425,000 positives in the US. Deaths are way up too: Belgium just reported 199, equal to 6,000 US deaths.

So. What's it mean?

From a smart GOP stakeholder. I think a lot of Republicans are worried about vote-by-mail in states with a history of aggressive vote-gathering tactics but at the same time don't want to sound like bitter-enders.

I think there was fraud. Not sure it would impact the electoral math at the end of the day, but it's worth knowing how it works and how to stop it in the future. .

Very early days, but looking ahead:

If these results hold the story will go: Covid: Created in China, beaten in the US (and UK).

Remember how 'merica was losing its soft power?

About that...

We will see.

Further, many major "nonpartisan" national polls had @joebiden up 10+ points in the days (NOT WEEKS, DAYS) before the election - @CNBC @NBC @quinnipiacpoll @TheEconomist to name just four. It was only the supposedly GOP leaning polls that pulled the average anywhere reasonable.

I used to think @NateSilver538 was essentially honest, even if he leaned Democratic. I am surprised he's defending the indefensible here. The polls were WAY off, so far off that no one is going to trust them for a long time.

Technical question (virologists/MBB types, feel free to email me):

PCR tests can pick up dead virus for months.
Antibody tests (at least IgG) seem to have a short shelf life.
Could people who have fully recovered from [illegible] be showing up as positive AND no antibodies?

25 28 176

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · 21 Min.

More broadly, has anyone tried to quantify the issue I raised yesterday, if the PCR tests will just naturally begin to roll higher over time because more and more people will have dead virus in their bodies?

19 22 134

Ken Bradley @KenBrad55393480 · 17 Min.

DING! we have a winner. And how long will you keep testing positive? Remember the 12+ weeks? How did they arrive at that? They only tested them for 12 weeks...I.e people still tested positive at the conclusion of the study and hence the open-ended 12+

Germany has to be testing or counting differently than other countries.

DocQ22 @VandyFanSC · 3m

It's simple. They run their rtPCR around 27 CT, which is accurate and appropriate. They're not inventing cases with CT's above 40. In turn, they aren't mislabeling deaths from other causes.

I'm old enough to remember @mtosterholm, now on @joebiden's #Covid task force, calling for a hard US lockdown, with Europe the model. (It was August.)

If Nobel Laureate Kary Mullis, who invented PCR (which is wrongly used and manipulated to test for a particle that might be left over from a cold), had not conveniently died in August last year, he'd be telling Cuomo that science has absolutely nothing to do with it.

It's like they waited for dr. Mullis to die before using his test to destroy the world, as a courtesy Arizona, Houston, Central Florida: past peak. Los Angeles: probably at or just past peak.

Deaths lag but it looks like the Sunbelt spike has topped out without hospital overrun or even severe strain (aside from a couple isolated hospitals). And far fewer deaths than wave one.

even forgetting to put it over his nose. Every single one of his activities have been moved online, including his transitional schooling which is proving hopeless. His therapist quit so we've been floundering to find someone to work with him, having finally arrived at working with a therapist allowing in-person visits (masked...).

Last week, our son divulged to his therapist that he is having thoughts about killing himself.

All good except one critical mistake you made when talking about this being a problem of advanced & aged societies. Age is simply not a causal factor when it comes to COVID-19 impact and severity:

> Mello.B33 @B33Mello
> 11/ ... impact and severity. Let's look at Japan, as they have over 36m people over 65 (oldest population it the world too) and they only had ~1,700 deaths which equates to only 14 deaths per million. It looks like old & healthy are not even at risk.

I figured you'd learned your lesson and I could move on, but apparently not. So let's just do this the simplest possible way, doctor.

You wrote that people have been "dying in waiting rooms" in Philadelphia over the last few days.

That statement is
A) True
B) False

Are you familiar with the concept of delays in care and overcrowding, or do you not understand anything about medicine, as I surmise you don't?

A lot of emergency medicine is time-sensitive.

On first review, two explanations come to mind, neither great for China: the first is that this version of SarsCov2 was less dangerous than the one that mysteriously appeared in Wuhan... the other is the virus is the same but that the chaos in Wuhan altered our view of it.

The models failed. In real time. Even in NY state, the April 1 iteration of [redacted] model estimated four times the hospitalizations last week as were taking place.

99 1.0K 2.6K

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson

2/ But it's crucial to understand WHY they failed.

There is a TIME LAG between infection, symptoms, hospitalization, ICU care, and death. 5 days on average from infection to symptoms, several more days to hospitalization, 2-3 more to ICU care. These are averages, but correct.

From a reader in Oregon whose family has been devastated by lockdowns, school closings and “social distancing” rules:

“I will do everything I can to see my mother and they can come arrest me... I fear I am reaching a breaking point.”

First, sorry for the long email, apparently I needed to get some stuff off of my chest!

I wanted to share my story. The attached screen shot is a text from my mother. The back story is that my Dad passed away in October. In March he was in good health, some minor issues but good health for someone who was 87. I used to go to lunch with him several times a month. During lockdowns I was only able to see him a handful of times. His decline was shocking. My mom has no doubt the lockdowns contributed to his rapid decline and death. She said he would talk about missing his kids and grandkids all the time. Based upon what I saw, I agree with her.

The text was me asking my mom to lunch. I know

The woke left trying to take credit for @joebiden's win by pointing to big margins in urban areas is particularly hilarious considering that those cities have gone hugely Democratic since before AOC grew up in Westchester. Lolcatz, as the kids say

> For Democrats, the election has illustrated the fragility of their coalition.

> With Mr. Biden racking up overwhelming margins in Philadelphia, Detroit and Milwaukee — and even winning metropolitan Phoenix and Atlanta — progressives have become angered by the party establishment's complaints about the issues energizing activists.

The models tell us that if we run 40 PCR cycles and death certificate match, we are going to have lots of deaths we can call Covid forever. And we are going to count them and publicize them and use them like you wouldn't believe.

That would be just so tragic if that happens.

Who has the coronavirus?

No, @WHO has the coronavirus.

"...the health agency's strict hygiene, screening and other prevention measures were not sufficient to spare it from the pandemic..."

Say it with me: Virus gonna virus.

Good to see @robertcobrien - a consummate professional who has been part of the Trump Administration's biggest foreign policy wins (like that whole Middle East peace thing you haven't heard much about) - speaking out on this.

Opioid overdose deaths in 2020 compared to 2019:

Up 95% in Syracuse (Jan-June)
70% in Oregon (spring)
50% in Kentucky (Jan-August)
25% in Maine (Jan-June)

Nationally, a 50% rise in overdoses would be 35,000+ additional deaths in 2020.

LOCKDOWNS KILL.

A true quadrafecta of idiocy:

#sarscov2 doesn't spread outside;
kids aren't at risk, and kids who are healthy enough to play team sports truly aren't;
winter weather and physical activity compromise masks immediately;
And, oh yeah, MASKS DON'T WORK.

Vinay Prasad @VPrasadMDMPH
Washington state gov. now requiring kids to wear cloth masks for outdoor sporting events at all times

PS this is the weather ...

And the Howard County (Maryland) public school district - with 60,000 students in wealthy suburban DC - has just decided to stay virtual through April 15.

Congrats to Howard County for becoming one of the first districts in the United States to deny kids a full year of school!

Not just the 1619 Project: @nytimes is now making a practice of changing problematic stories without telling readers (sorry, saying you've "updated" an article months later does not count). A July article spread a likely #Covid hoax; only in September did the Times admit as much.

Hey, look, a “country level analysis” today in a crummy little journal called @thelancet says “full lockdowns and widespread testing were not associated with reduced COVID-19 mortality.” Whoopsie! Everybody makes mistakes. thelancet.com/journals/eclin ..

Increasing COVID-19 caseloads were associated with countries with higher obesity (adjusted rate ratio [RR]=1.06; 95%CI: 1.01-1.11), median population age (RR=1.10; 95%CI: 1.05-1.15) and longer time to border closures from the first reported case (RR=1.04; 95%CI: 1.01-1.08). Increased mortality per million was significantly associated with higher obesity prevalence (RR=1.12; 95%CI: 1.06-1.19) and per capita gross domestic product (GDP) (RR=1.03; 95%CI: 1.00-1.06). Reduced income dispersion reduced mortality (RR=0.88; 95%CI: 0.83–0.93) and the number of critical cases (RR=0.92; 95% CI: 0.87-0.97). Rapid border closures, full lockdowns, and

In July there was the "Covid party" story; in April the "(medical) residents dying" story. This is the fall version, only less checkable, more political, and even more cynical.

> Ann Bauer @annbauerwriter
> I keep seeing the same apocryphal tweet from an ICU nurse who had to take care of a Covid patient who claimed the disease was fake. I've read this now from three diff accounts in three diff cities, all with similar wording and details. What's happening?

Then there's this. As a rule, third-year medical students are lucky if they're allowed to talk to a patient, but I guess Mackenzie is exceptional. Anyway the story of the "coding young person" has been retweeted/liked 280,000 times, so it must be true.

What do 3rd year medical students do?

Doing pre-rounds as a third-year:

Collecting vitals and seeing patients for the first time: You need to gather the information to present to your residents and attending. Talking to the patient and doing a patient exam by yourself. Checking with the nurse and checking the chart for earlier notes.

Now the wolves are baying for Scott Atlas. Does anyone truly think he was calling for violence when he asked people to "rise up"? Does anyone think he's doing this for any reason but a genuine belief that lockdowns are a terrible strategy?

And does anyone think that people SHOULDN'T be allowed to protest laws and restrictions they think are unconstitutional, as Dr. Atlas clearly intended to say?

(Trick question, we know plenty of CNNs and other woke types think the answer depends on what you're protesting.)
